MIDDLEBURY HEARS MYRA HESS CONCERT

Rendition of Chopin's Etudes is Feature of Her Playing.

BACH FOR ENCORES

Chooses Musicians Program of Difficult Numbers. Interprets Each Varying Mood of Composer.

Middlebury was flattered last Thursday night by the program which Myra Hess, famous English pianist, chose for her recital at the Congregational church. It was a musician's program, presenting an unlimited interest to all students of music, and containing none of the sentimental and more "popular" music which is often tacked on to please a less musically educated audience.

Miss Hess has a most remarkable variety of moods, she puts herself definitely into each piece; however, one never feels that she has imposed her personality on that of the composer, but rather that she is interpreting his feelings in the most exact manner possible.

In the opening number, the Cesar Franck prelude, fugue, and variations showed her wide variety of touch and her delicate shades of tone color.

In the Bach selections Miss Hess tone seemed heavier, but of course one must realize that the piano was a large and brilliant one for such a small hall. Miss Hess has won a great deal of her fame by her playing of Bach. She seems to feel him and to interpret him with a mastery and an understanding that are rare. Most pianists attack a Bach number with awe and respect, but seldom are able really to grasp his feelings and his purpose as does Miss Hess.

It has often been said that women pianists, no matter how good, can never equal men pianists because they have not the strength or the endurance to play some of the most difficult and exacting pieces. Certainly no man could have given more to the Brahms number, which is an extremely difficult piece. It consists of a theme upon which there are twenty-five variations. Brahms has so manipulated them that the result is a simply tremendous variety of moods. This demands so much of the performer that Miss Hess her-

SAXONIAN CONTEST TO CLOSE MONDAY

Three Prizes to Be Awarded for Best Short Stories Submitted.

Only five days now remain before the closing date of the annual Saxonian short story contest. All manuscripts must be in the hands of the editor, Jilda Pacheco '31, by Monday, December 15.

The contest is open to all classes, and students are urged to make contributions. All stories should be typewritten, on one side only, doublespaced, and signed with a nom de plume. A sealed envelope should be submitted with the manuscript, containing the title of the story, and the author's real name. Professors Harry G. Owen, Reginald S. Cook, and Lansing V. Hammond will serve as judges.

Three prizes are awarded, a first of $25, and a second and third of $15 and $10 respectively. The decision of the judges is announced shortly after the Christmas vacation, and prize winning stories are published in subsequent issues of the Saxonian. Any other entries which are suitable may also be published before the close of the year.

No restriction is placed upon subject matter of stories submitted, but it would be well to keep in mind the suitability of the story for a college magazine.

College Library Plans Display of Rare Books

Due to the interest shown recently in first editions and rare books, the college librarians wish to announce that plans have been formulated for an exhibition of first editions owned by the students.

This exhibition will be held in the Abernethy room early in January, and in order that it may be successful, the cooperation of all students is earnestly requested. The Christmas vacation period offers an excellent opportunity for hunting out first editions and rare copies to add to the exhibit. These first editions are not to be limited to American authors, nor to any particular period of literature, and either modern or early first editions are desired.

CHORAL CLUB TO PRESENT CANTATA

"The Cradle of Bethlehem" Will Be Given at Mead Chapel December 12.

"The Cradle of Bethlehem", Christmas cantata by Irenee Bergee, will be presented by the Middlebury College Choral club Friday evening, December 12, at Mead chapel, as the first student chorus program of the year.

The club consisting of fifty members will sing the ensemble parts. The entire voice program is to be student conducted, by Richard A. Fear, '31. Prof. Alfred Larsen will lead the orchestra. At the organ is Dorothy S. Johnson, '31, and at the piano, Cleone Ford, '32. Soloists are from the voice department. Miss Minnie Hayden who has charge of the Choral club plans for a large audience of faculty, students and out of town guests.

The program follows:

LITERATI BALL WILL OPEN WINTER SEASON

Committee Defines Rule of Eligibility; Dance to Be Held January 17 at the Inn.

The third annual literati ball will be held Saturday evening January 17 at the Middlebury Inn, under the auspices of Pi Delta Epsilon.

The dance is a closed affair according to ruling of the college administration because the number of open dances allowed per year is already filled. This ruling means that only members of the student body who are or have been members or tryouts for any recognized college publication are eligible to attend, inviting a friend as a partner. One member of each couple must be eligible according to the above ruling. As in the past, it is in order for women literati who wish to attend to ask members of the men's college to be their partners.

Bids for the dance will be on sale before the close of college for the Christmas recess. These bids or tickets may be obtained from members of the committee for the price of three dollars. The committee is composed of Richard H. Amerman '31, chairman, Marion L. Simmons '31, Kenneth C. Parker '31, C. Evelyn Benjamin '32, and Charles P. Bailey '32.

Programs are being planned which will be quite novel, yet in keeping with the atmosphere of the dance, which is publicational. These programs will be ready for distribution to those having bids shortly after vacation.

The literati ball, although there have been but two previous ones, has gained a great deal of prestige in the past two years and is looked forward to with a great deal of enthusiasm on the part of all college literati. The committee is at work on new ideas for making

"CRADLE SONG" TO BE CHRISTMAS PLAY

Scheduled for Presentation Next Wednesday and Thursday.

CAST NOW CHOSEN

Drama Written in Spanish by Gregorio Martinez Sierra Characterized by Simplicity and Restraint.

The cast of "The Cradle Song" by Gregorio and Maria Martinez Sierra, the Christmas play which will be presented at the Playhouse December 17 and 18, was recently chosen by V. Spencer Goodreds, director of dramatics.

"The Cradle Song" is a two act comedy with a poetic interlude. The scene, laid in a Spanish convent of Dominican nuns, is an interesting study of the life of the sisters within the cloister.

This comedy shows Martinez Sierra at his best. The content is plainly implicit from the opening lines until the final curtain. The beauty of the play lies in its simplicity, restraint and in the depiction of the group as a whole rather than portrayal of individual character.

Sierra is one of the outstanding contemporary dramatists. Of note is his play "The Kingdom of God" which was

Dartmouth and Vermont Papers on Library Rack

The University of Vermont "Cynic", published Tuesday and Friday of each week, and the "Daily Dartmouth" will hereafter be kept on the newspaper rack of the Egbert Starr library.

Decision to keep these exchange papers in a place more accessible than the mixed heap of collegiate journals on the table at the entrance to the Abernethy wing, was made by the CAMPUS board at the suggestion of several undergraduates who expressed a desire to read the news of these two near-by colleges.

The carrying out of this plan was made possible by the library officials' generous acceptance of the suggestion made by the CAMPUS.

VARSITY DEBATERS PREPARE FOR TRIP

To Meet Keene Normal School, Tufts College, and Boston University on Dec. 17, 18 and 19.

Final preparations are being made by the men's varsity debating team for the annual trip to Boston and vicinity. This trip is made each year directly preceeding the Christmas recess. The Middlebury team will be composed of Reamer Kline '32, Edward Yerovitz '33, Thomas Duffield '33, and William S. Weier '33, assistant manager.

Wednesday evening, December 17, the team will oppose Keene normal school at Keene, N. H. The subject that will be used for debate is, resolved, that mechanical and scientific progress do not necessarily represent an advance in civilization. Middlebury will uphold the negative case. The normal school team, which is coached by Edna McGlynn, who a few years ago was a member of the championship women's debating

KALEIDOSCOPE BOARD STAGES FINAL DRIVE

Campaign Directed by James Olson, Will Close Sales of Yearbook.

A final subscription drive is being conducted this week by the circulation staff of the 1932 Kaleidoscope. This campaign will practically close the sales for the yearbook, and thus students are urged to take full advantage of the opportunity.

James Olson, circulation manager, will direct a careful canvass of all persons who have not yet subscribed. The number of copies sold has already passed the four hundred mark, and the board expects that the final count will very nearly reach five hundred copies. With this large circulation, and an advertising campaign which promises to exceed that of past years, the financial success of the book is assured.

Within the past week the first shipment of individual photographs have been received from Warren Kay Vantine Studios of Boston. These were distributed to the students on Saturday, and another shipment is expected tomorrow. Announcement of distribution will be made in Chapel. All Juniors who noted mistakes and discrepancies in their orders should confer directly with the photographer in Boston, mentioning that the order comes under the Kaleidoscope Plan. Announcement by Mr. Vantine has been made to the effect that the enlargemnts will be shipped the latter part of this week.

A majority of the "glossies" of the students and faculty have been received by the editor, and will be cut and shipped to the engraver this week. Practically all copy has been received, and prospects at this early hour are bright for a book that will appear on time.

MIDDLEBURY FIVE TO MEET CLARKSON

Opening Game of Season to Be Played Saturday Night.

PANTHER FAVORED

Comparative Strength of Rival Teams Unknown; Engineers' Heavy Slate a Help to Blue.

Middlebury's basketball quintet will open its season Saturday on the McCullough court with Clarkson Tech furnishing the opposition. This game will give the Panther followers their first chance to view the aggregation which will try to carry on the impressive record set up by the Blue fives of the past two years.

The ability of the Clarkson crew is a mystery and will probably remain one until after tonight's contest with Vermont. Clarkson had a fair season last year and have a group of veterans back for service, but thus far nothing has been heard around this section about the strength of this season's five.

Vermont, St. Michael's, Norwich and Middlebury will be met by the Engineers on four successive nights and with a lineup of contests like that, the Clarkson boys must have a pretty strong team. Only a rugged team can stand up under four grueling contests on four straight nights and it would seem as though Clarkson would hardly attempt any such schedule if there was not at least some confidence in the ability of the quintet.

Coach Beck, in company with the remaining conference mentors, will attend all of this sets of four games to look over the referees. A different man will officiate in each contest and the coaches are going to talk the situation over afterwards and try to get as uniform and efficient a refereeing system as possible.

The Panther five has been getting in some hard workouts in the gym and played a practice game with the fresh- Beck is not absolutely sure as to what the lineup will be, it is probable that Captain Bullukian and Ashdown will start at the forward berths, Corliss at center, with Hoyle and McKenzie at the guard positions.

WOMEN MEET B. U. DEBATERS TONIGHT

Will Uphold the Value of Advertising in Modern Times.

The women's debating team of Boston university will meet the Middlebury team in Mead Memorial chapel tonight at 8 p. m., in a debate on the question "Resolved: that the large part advertsing plays in modern civilization is to be deplored." The Middlebury team composed of Mary Henseler '31, Jilda Pacheco '31 and Eva Tuttle '32, will uphold the affirmative side of the question against the B. U. debaters, Mary Walsh '31, Anna Craig '32, and Elizabeth Causer '32.

The judges will be Mrs. A. W. Dickens and Miss Marion Gary of Rutland and Carl B. Krantz of Middlebury. President Moody will preside. The first affirmative speech will be limited to nine minutes and fourteen minutes will be allowed for the rest, with a five minute rebuttal for the affirmative.

No admission will be charged.

Tomorrow night a Middlebury team composed of Ellen Kellogg '31, Jilda Pacheco '31 and Eva Tuttle '32 is scheduled to meet St. Lawrence university at Canton, N. Y. They will debate the question "Resolved: that the United States should recognize Russia."

MUSICAL SERVICE.

For the first time since last Easter when "The Holy City" was presented, the student body will have an opportunity to hear a full length musical service at Sunday vespers. In place of the usual out of town speaker, that is to say, an organization of student personnel and leadership is to take over the hour. For more than three weeks this group of undergraduate men and women have worked hard at rehearsals with hearty cooperation from the music department. In consequence of their earnest effort an accomplished performance is assured. From these points several interesting implications can be drawn.

It may be observed, justly, we think, that a procession of chapel speakers over a considerable period of time tends to become somewhat monotonous. Appearing week after week without a break as they do students become bored and simply for want of variety. The musical service planned for this Sunday will serve several useful purposes. For one thing it will vary the vespers routine which the student body has come to take, rightfully or no, as a matter of course. Furthermore and perhaps most important the service will give ambitious students a chance to work hard at music, a truly constructive and valuable experience.

During the past fall piano and violin solos were given a place in the regular service with great effect, and these individual performances were invariably stimulating and well received. It is apparent that students appreciate music at vespers, and it is reasonable to suppose that a wholly musical service will prove just as popular. Choral ceremonies of this sort, we feel, might very appropriately be given a prominent place in vespers during the remainder of the college year.

FRIDAY'S CANTATA.

While on the subject of music we should mention the Christmas Cantata to be given by the undergraduate Choral club in Mead chapel Friday evening of this week. Again we have the agreeable prospect of a most entertaining performance which represents lengthy preparation and characteristic interest. Middlebury has become a musical college during the past few years and the present cantata is but an outward expression of the spirit.

It is to be hoped that student body, faculty, and townspeople will take advantage of this opportunity to hear a thoroughly coached group sing a well known and most timely composition of modern sacred music.

THIS COLUMN.

When asked if composing editorials is an easy task an emphatic affirmative is usually returned. Practically the sole difficulty in writing a weekly column of comment from the editor's standpoint is that one easily gets into the habit of being a scold. Nothing is simpler to set down than destructive criticism. If this tendency appears we can only hope to be pardoned for taking a human line of least resistance. In our effort to point out various student foibles, a holier than thou attitude is often assumed unknowingly. If we have implied any personal reflections in this column we wish it understood that this was in no way our purpose. Should such an impression be left we wish frankly to apologize for it.

Galley Grist

"CAKES AND ALE: or THE SKELETON IN THE CLOSET", by W. Somerset Maugham, New York, Doubleday Doran & Co., $2.00.

"Cakes and Ale" is nowhere nearly so great a novel as "Of Human Bondage", but it is worth reading. For in it Maugham has returned to his introspection which made his earlier book what it is and, from time to time, has reached real heights in the present novel.

The story deals with the closing days of the life of Edward Driffield, the greatest Victorian novelist, his wife, his friends, his celebrity, and the skeleton in his closet: a bar maid whom he has married as a young man and whom he had naturally divorced when fame came to him.

Unfortunately, his first wife had a genius for prostitution and Driffield was caused no end of embarrassment by the troubles of his former spouse, until we last see her a broken down woman of seventy.

It is more or less obvious that the central figure, Driffield is the late Thomas Hardy thinly disguised, while the other young writers are Hugh Walpole, Maugham himself, and one or two of the lesser luminaries.

The book is well tailored and reflects the ability of the writer to a high degree and is most certainly one of the best books of this season, if nothing more can be said for it.

"MEMORIES AND VAGARIES", by Alex Munthe, New York, E. P. Dutton Co.

If you enjoyed the famous "Story of San Michele" which has been a best seller now for a year and a half, you will find a great deal of interesting material in "Memories and Vagaries", a reprint of Dr. Munthe's first book of essays which was originally published in 1898.

The scenes of "San Michele" again appear together with a few of the characters of the former book. Several scenes are devoted to the cholera plague in Naples, but for some reason they do not seem as terrifying in "Memories and Vagaries" as they did in the other book. Perhaps because Munthe's technique was not so well developed at that time, or because he was too close to the tragedy to be able to present a satisfactory panorama of it.

While the book lacks the maturity and far-sightedness of the "Story of San Michele" there is more vigor and fire in it. If you have not as yet read "The Story of San Michele" by all means read "Memories and Vagaries" before you start the larger book. You will be well compensated for the expenditure of your time.

Mr. Ward S. Yunker '31, has asked us to state that he is not Y. K. W., nor is he in any way connected with department which writes the dramatic criticisms.

Our sincere apologies to Hillcrest. The seat of that nefarious organization known as the bachelor's club is Pearsons and not Hillcrest as previously stated. Incidentally, the B. C. is making good headway and an old maid's club has been started in Painter as a compliment to the ingenuity exhibited by the girls who collect heavily on their friendships.

We see the subtracting machines are beginning to return to the local metropolis. Another sign of the passing of this period of world wide depression.

Gramp Harrington has a favorite dish which he has been advertising in his philosophy class. The principal ingredients seem to be two eggs, one fried on one side and one on the other. The trouble seems to be that the two are too often confused for the dish to be successful.

The local court is in session. The cases so far have been of little interest, but all the town characters except Johnny Kenworthy and one or two others are always present. That in itself should be a better show than the average circus.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor of the Campus:

I am sure the editor of the CAMPUS has mistaken entirely the spirit in which Y. K. W. has written his recent dramatic reviews. There is no typographical war on, as far as he is concerned. He is simply following to its logical conclusion the spirit of recent typographical innovations originating with the Dramatic club. If he seems to be using that form of argument which is called in debate the reductio ad absurdum, that is nothing more than the penalty of his loyalty to the new idea. He tells me that he was more than rejoiced to discover that other disciples have flocked into the fold since he printed his first review in lower case, and that the whole athletic department signified its allegiance to the new typographical school in printing the programs of the Vermont game in the new way. Let the good work go on, he says.

Even the administration, in practice, if not in precept, is behind the movement. After that first drama review, President Moody, recognizing me behind the faint disguise of Y. K. W., wrote me the following note, entirely in lower case:

> october 29
> dear cady:
> i am so pleased over your wonderful use of the lower case in the campus that i cannot contain myself. strength to your right arm. my wife and i have been bored by it for weeks. and your article ought to stop it.
> paul d. moody.

Is it any wonder that this note is one of my most cherished possessions, and that encouraged by such support, I took up with diligence the furthering of the movement, for typographical irregularity, so courageously started by the Dramatic club, as a by-product of their activities? Under such conditions, I do not hesitate to appeal to the editor for the support of the CAMPUS in our campaign.

Sincerely,
(Signed) FRANK W. CADY.

WASTE OF EARNED GAINS CONDEMNED

Rev. Fraser Deplores Indifference and Failure of World to Utilize Results of Toil.

Rev. James Fraser of Elizabethtown, N. Y., spoke at vespers Sunday, December 7, taking as his text Proverbs 12:27—"The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting."

"This proverb," said Rev. Fraser, "is a bit of crystallized wisdom which expresses the very evident fact that few people actually take advantage of what they have toiled to get." He developed his subject in three directions, first considering it from the individual side, treating the quality of friendship. True friendship is the result of growth; it is created by time and effort, yet many allow its ties to be broken by a thoughtless word or act. They do not enjoy the results of the fine thing which has been so long developing.

Then, from the national point of view, Rev. Fraser declared that we all realize how men suffered and died to establish the liberty of our country. History is not the record of kings and wars but of lives of gallant souls who strove for something better. The last war was a "war to end war". Men had congratulated themselves that they were civilized, but the nineteenth century was full of fighting and bloodshed. Now we are enjoying peace but if men go back to beer, to business, and to pleasure and regard the ideals for which the Great War was fought as mere platitudes the opportunity will be wasted. The higher patriotism believes in the deathless divinity of conscience, justice and love; it does not clamour of Nordic superiority but recognizes the brotherhood of man.

In the third place he spoke of the spiritual application of the verse. The world has won spiritual victories. It has conquered the cruel ideas of witchcraft. It has done a good deal to break down the "vicious caste system of American Christianity called denominationalism". But having won so much it is necessary to keep on, to employ the follow through method and not, like the huntsman of the proverb, to waste that which has been gained.

U. V. M. Receives Gift of Vermontiana.

"Undoubtedly the Wilbur collection of Vermontiana contains the most valuable source of old Vermont laws known to exist," declared Pres. Guy W. Bailey when questioned recently about the collection of old Vermont manuscripts, prints, books and broadsides made by James Benjamin Wilbur during his lifetime and bequeathed along with certain monetary considerations to the University.

Mr. Wilbur was interested in Vermont agriculture, and was largely instrumental in getting the first agricultural agent in Vermont. Mr. Wilbur was also interested in good roads, and in Vermont history. Gradually, over a period of years, he made a collection of old books and manuscripts concerned with early Vermont history, until finally it became the finest, and most valuable, collection of Vermontiana to be found.

The collection will occupy a special room in the Fleming Museum.—Vermont Cynic.

SOPHS AND JUNIORS LEAD IN VOLLEYBALL

Both Have Strong Teams and Will Meet in Championship Match Late This Week.

Women's volleyball is progressing into the second round of play with the juniors and sophomores leading, each with an even chance for the championship. The winning team must complete the season without a defeat.

The junior-sophomore volleyball game, December 5, was the most closely contested and generally best played match this season. The two teams furnished an exciting game in which the scores were close.

The juniors got the jump and won the first game 21-17, but only after a struggle did they obtain the last two successive points. A change of courts spurred the sophomores, for they smashed their way through to a 21-16 score in the second game. However, the third and final game featured net smashes for the junior team, while the sophs weakened during the first half of the game. Time and again the juniors won points, placing the ball with ease just over the net, and finding the gaps, holes, and weak spots in the sophomore territory. With the juniors leading 10-0, the underclassmen regained their former stride. Several times they held the juniors from gaining the final two consecutive points. With determination they fought their way to a 19-19 tie. At this point, the players showed good teamwork. Nevertheless, after good volleying, which brought out splendid set-up work and displayed fine cross-court attack, the juniors won the point and broke the deadlock. They immediately followed through with the match point, taking advantage of the momentary sophomore let-down.

Scores: juniors, 21-117, 16-21, 21-19.

The sophomore-freshman volleyball game, December 8, was slow and one-sided. The sophomores easily won the match in straight games by the scores, 21-11, 21-2. Although the points were overwhelmingly in favor of the sophomores, their team played raggedly, and had it not been for the inexperience of the freshman, the game might have had a decidedly different outcome.

Substitutions: sophomores — Haynes for McKinnon, Whittier for McMenemy, Delfs for Whittier.

Score: sophomores 21-11, 21-2.

Referee: Cady '32; scorer: Updyke '33.

The most important second round match, the junior-sophomore tilt, December 9, ended with the sophomores avenging their former defeat at the hands of the juniors, by winning in straight games, with the scores 21-18, 21-18. The first game was the fastest and best played, though the match as a whole was disappointingly slow. The juniors were off-form, and displayed none of their former brilliant court smashes; at no time throughout the match did they hold the lead. The sophomores, on the other hand, were greatly improved and they creditably covered the physically weak territory. Due to this victory, the sophomores are now tied with the juniors for first place, and unless some unexpected upset occurs in the few remaining games, these two teams will clash to play off the tie some time during the latter part of the week.

The senior-freshman battle, December 9, provided great suspense. The freshman team was all set for victory after easily chalking up the first game, 21-8. In the following game, the freshmen, either from overconfidence or nervous tension, weakened and lost by the score 21-15. Buoyed up by this victory, the seniors gained the third game without difficulty by the score 21-7.

Herald-Tribune Praises Middlebury Sport Policy

The athletic policy of Middlebury College comes in for considerable praise in an article in Sunday's Herald-Tribune magazine section, entitled "The End of the Rah-Rah Era", and written by Henrietta Sperry Ripperger.

It is pointed out that among the undergraduates in the eastern colleges the rah-rah spirit is slowly giving place to something very like the European conception of varsity life in which work is the object, games are recreational, and the rest of life is as individual as life in the outside world.

Evidence of this trend comes from Yale where recent changes have placed more emphasis on intramural games and individual sports. In the "Little Three"— Amherst, Wesleyan, and Williams — there is the same shift from a highly cultivated athletic system revolving around a winning team to a system in which everyone has some activity.

In regard to Middlebury, the following is stated: "The athletic policy at Middlebury is now in charge of a director of athletics who is ranked as a professor. Nine additional tennis courts and a hockey rink have been constructed recently, and the athletic life is an integral part of the college as a whole, says the official report. This seems to indicate an increasing emphasis on the kinds of sports which may be enjoyed in life after college as differentiated from the type which fills the cheering sections."

Horr and Bill Chosen Managers of Football

The manager and assistant manager of varsity football for the ensuing year have been announced recently by Coach Arthur M. Brown, director of athletics.

William E. Horr '32, of Barnavald, N. Y., assistant manager of this year's team, automatically succeeds to the post of varsity manager. Mr. Horr is assistant business manager of the CAMPUS, and assistant advertising manager of 1932 Kaleidoscope. He was also on both the frosh frolic and soph hop committees. He is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Harthon L. Bill '33, of Bridgeport, Conn., has been elected to the position of assistant manager. Mr. Bill was assistant manager of last year's freshman football team. He is a member of the news staff of the CAMPUS, dramatic club, and a try-out for the 1933 Kaleidoscope. Mr. Bill is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon.

HOCKEY SCHEDULE NEARLY COMPLETE

Ten Games Planned and One More Pending; Blue Will Meet Strong Competition; Squad Showing Up Well in Practice.

Present prospects indicate a busy and interesting season for Middlebury's veteran hockey sextet. The combined efforts of M. C. Robinson '31, manager, and R. J. Phelan, coach, have produced a slate which includes ten or possibly eleven games, offering a challenge to an unusually strong Blue and White team.

If the Harvard encounter takes place January 7, the team will go to Providence, R. I., to meet Brown on the ninth, but if Harvard desires to postpone the game to the fourteenth, Middlebury will not be able to play Brown this year.

Weather has been such that only a few days of practice on Porter pond have provided opportunity for workouts on the ice, but Captain Crocker and his men have also been working under Coach Phelan in the gym to assure daily practice. The team seems to be developing very well and there are a number of very good substitutes, especially for the offensive combinations.

The regular team will consist entirely of veteran players. Captain Crocker and Makela will hold down the wing positions, with Nelson at the center position. Foote, last year's captain, and Huntington will take care of the defense. Webster is showing up very well this year as goalie and should perform even better than last season.

Yeomans, Chappell, MacLean, Gordon and Viehman present a strong backing to the offense of the first team. Brewer, a defense man of experience, is on deck again this year. Eaton and Allen are shaping up well as goalies this year, and Webster cannot yet be sure of the position for the whole of the season. The forward line has lost a very good wingman in Melbye, a letter man for the last two years who is unable to play this season on account of illness.

The schedule follows:

Dec. 19	Hamilton	there
Jan. 7 or 14	Harvard	there
Jan. 12	Princeton	there
Jan. 13	Williams	there
Jan. 16	Amherst	here
Jan. 17	Norwich	there
Jan. 24	Norwich	here
Jan. 31	St. Stephens	here
Feb. 17	Vermont	there
Feb. 23	Vermont	here

Middlebury Gridsters are Thirty Points Better Than Notre Dame, According to "Comparative Scores"

The most perfect example of juggling comparative football scores that the CAMPUS has ever seen, proves that Middlebury, and not Notre Dame, should be the football champion of the country. In fact, the Panther is proven to be thirty points better than the Ramblers!

The reasoning involves no misrepresentation, and is logical in every step; but unfortunately the superiority exists only on paper, and it is feared that Grantland Rice will not consider it in making All-American selections.

For the amusement of CAMPUS readers, the statistics are given below:

Middlebury defeated Norwich eleven points worse than Bates did; then the scores follow in logical sequence, thus; Bates 13, Bowdoin 0; Bowdoin 19, Tufts 14; Tufts 10, New Hampshire 8; New Hampshire 9, Brown 0; Brown 13, Holy Cross 0; Holy Cross 27, Harvard 0; Harvard 13, Yale 0; Yale 0, Dartmouth 0.

This makes Middlebury eleven points better than Bates, twenty-four points better than Bowdoin, twenty-nine than New Hampshire, forty better than Brown, fifty-three better than Holy Cross, eighty better than Harvard, and ninety-three better than Yale and Dartmouth.

Dartmouth, the Panther's inferior by ninety-three points, lost to Stanford 14-7, making the latter eighty-six points weaker than Middlebury. Stanford was downed by Southern California 41-12, giving Middlebury a fifty-seven point advantage over the latter. Notre Dame was only twenty-seven points better than Southern California, which leaves Middlebury with a thirty point advantage over Notre Dame.

team at Boston university, is considerably stronger than last year.

Tufts college will be encountered on the following evening. The debate will take place in Goddard hall, Medford, Mass. The subject for debate is, resolved, that adequate provision for censorship be incorporated into legislation. In consideration of this question it is understood that censorship shall include books, theater and the press, as regards morality and crime but not religion and politics. Tufts will uphold the negative.

The final debate of the trip will take place on Friday evening when Boston university is opposed. Middlebury will again support the negative case on the question of machine civilization.

MYRA HESS PLAYS AT MIDDLEBURY

self said that she has only heard it given once or twice by concert pianists. It is interesting to note that Paderewski is now playing this number.

The last composer on Miss Hess' program was Chopin. Here again we will speak of Paderewski. Miss Hess is one of the best interpreters of Chopin so far as pure pianism is concerned. Paderewski plays in a much more impressionistic manner than Miss Hess, subjecting the music to his own moods, whereas Miss Hess always observes most strictly, the requirements of the music.

The only criticism of her Chopin numbers is for the Butterfly Etude which did not seem up to the others. Nocturne, also, is usually interpreted more dramatically.

The encores were a Bach choral of Miss Hess' own arrangement, and another Bach number a gigue from a French suite.

Middlebury was certainly fortunate to be able to hear Miss Hess who is undeniably the greatest woman pianist, and one of the few outstanding musicians playing in America this season. It did seem that neither the size nor the enthusiasm of the audience were in proportion to the magnitude of her reputation. C.B.

EDUCATION GROUP MEETS IN BOSTON

Saturday morning was taken up with a business meeting which included reports of committees and election of officers. The final address was delivered by William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette college, who emphasized the fact that our present system of education was too "water-tight", and that the students in our colleges are aimless because the colleges themselves are aimless.
